From the Chronicler

Greetings to the populace of Hidden Mountain.

It's crazy to think that we are starting a new year, gods giving that is, but here we are in 2025. I apologize but this Chroniclers schedule has gotten very crazy. I apologize for the lateness of this newsletter, appointments, work, and crazy schedules including big promotions in our household! But I have been working diligently and I am sharing our January with you! Sadly, Tear Sea's had to cancel Manannan due to the severe weather and the Snow in Charleston!

With all that being said, normal communications from this Chronicler. Please have articles, missives, poems or works of art submitted to the Chronicler email by or before the 25th of every month. If you have not submitted a recent Grant of Use permissions form, please visit the sca.org website to ensure that you submit the correct form. I truly appreciate all of the work of our artisans that put in the most amazing efforts! Many big things coming this year!

Yours in Service,

Lady Charlotte Radcliffe

Chronicler, Barony of Hidden Mountain

From the Seneschal

Baronial Seneschal

Greetings to the populace of Hidden Mountains

Despite the challenges brought by the recent winter storm and the unfortunate cancellations of events across the region, I hope everyone stayed safe and warm through the snowfall. While January may have been quieter than expected, February brings a full schedule of events in the surround Baronies, offering plenty of opportunities to gather, compete and celebrate.

Looking ahead, I am especially excited for our own Baronial Birthday in March, where we will come together to honor the rich history and strength of Hidden Mountains 41st year. Until then, stay safe, stay warm and I look forward to seeing you all soon!

Yours in Service,

Lord Geiffrid Wolfhart

Manannan A&S Brooch, A year long learning Curve

By: Mistress Jorunn nic Lochlainn

In the year 2023 and the aftermath of Mistress Megara's passing, I planned on making an enameled brooch for the A&S winner at Feast of Manannan MacLir in honor of her. It was to be in addition to the two she had created and enameled many years before. I wanted to collaborate with her if she had lived, but she passed before I could approach her with the offer. She was the first person to teach me enameling. As a beginner enamellist, I was sad that I lost my opportunity to get with Mistress Megara in order to gain insight from her enameling experience relating to the brooches she made. So, I started watching YouTube video's and researching enamel techniques. I watched a YouTube video on the way they enameled a reliquary box in the V&A museum in London, England. It was enameled using the champleve technique. I knew this was the technique I wanted to make the A&S Brooch.

Before I could approach the Canton with this offer, the event, Feast of Manannan MacLir, had been assigned to Mistress Tegan and her daughter, Lady Maddelena Valelta. In conversations with them I discovered they too, wanted a brooch for the A&S and was going to ask an enamellist outside of the Barony to make it. So, I asked if I could make it since this was my dream as well to make the brooch in memory of Mistress Megara, and I had already started work on it. They kindly agreed and we came up with an arrangement that Lady Maddelena would design what would be on the enameled portion of the brooch and I would apply it to enamel and make the brooch.

It was a very ambitious endeavor on my part since I was a beginner enamellist. Champleve enamel is the process of filling in a carved/acid etched design in copper or silver. Unlike the wire worked method of placing a shaped wire on top of the metal, adhering it with Kylfyr and filling in the wires with enamel, it needed to have the design acid etched into the copper. I had only acid etched once, with what I thought was success. I received the design a couple weeks before the event, held in 2024, and dove into the acid etching process to get the enameling done. I had already made the brooch and it now waited for the enameled plates. I also made a box that held the brooch and wood burned in the design of the brooch on the box.

I sadly discovered that my acid etching was not deep enough so when I applied the enamel, it did not set correctly (see the examples) and turned out very bad. I tried a couple times, and did not complete the enamel pieces for the brooch in order to be distributed to the winner of the A&S at the event in 2024.

So, it began. A yearlong learning curve. I knew what a learning curve was for the many years I put in researching and perfecting hand sewing leather gloves, which I am known for. In any learning curve you discover things and these are the things I discovered in my journey to enamel this brooch.

Manannan A&S Brooch, A year long learning Curve

By: Mistress Jorunn nic Lochlainn

February 2024 - The first thing I discovered is the enameling oven I used was not working properly and impacted the enamel process. So, I bought a brand new enameling oven. Then there was a learning curve in using this new oven. I had to get used to the programs and how long it took to melt the enamel on pieces of copper.

Failed Attempts 1

May 2024 - I also discovered my garage was too hot and humid to acid etch and enamel properly in the summer months. The humidity affected the enamel powder clumping it together and impacting the adherence to the copper. I tried to move everything inside but after conversation with an electrician about the wattage the oven pulled to a single outlet when it blew the circuit breaker, I realized for safety reasons, the oven needed to be on it's own circuit in the garage.

September 2024 - So, I installed a Mini-Split HVAC system in my garage to make the environment in out there conducive to the oven and enameling that needed to be done. That accomplished, I finally had the correct environment to process. All this while I was healing from gastric bypass surgery in early March. Suffering from dehydration is a byproduct of the procedure and I was working through these effects which continuously haunted me in everything I did.

Acid etching proved to be a challenge. I was not getting a deep enough 'cut' in the metal to enamel properly. So, instead of the couple/three hours recommended by some YouTube video's, I left one set in overnight hoping to get a deep cut. The next morning, I discovered the whole piece of copper had disintegrated and all that was left was the resist. Back to square one. I ordered a heavier gauge copper plate, 14 gauge vs the 22 gauge I had been working with. Then in my search, I found a new YouTube video on acid etching for champeve that made more sense.

- Copy design on copper piece. Use a varnish for resist, not a Sharpie as previous video's recommended.

Manannan A&S Brooch, A year long learning Curve

By: Mistress Jorunn nic Lochlainn

- Let the varnish dry overnight then using a sharp instrument, clean the edges of the varnish so they are not jagged. Carefully go over the varnish outlines one more time with paint brush and varnish and let dry.
- Set the copper piece on tape and mount it on a piece of foam so it will float on top of the acid hanging upside down.
- Place in bowl of acid then put this bowl on a vibrating surface. The vibrations help the etching process by facilitating the removal of the copper not covered by the resist enabling it to fall to the bottom of the bowl and away from the rest of the copper. I rigged up a fan in the top of a screen trash can so the acid filled bowl could sit on top of this and the gentle vibration of the running fan worked like a charm.
- In previous attempts, I found 3 hours in the acid bath was too short and overnight was too long. So, I compromised and putting a whole day aside to monitor and I settled on 8 hours. I checked it at 6 hours and saw it needed a little more time so it went in the acid for one more hour and turns out 7 hours was the magic number. Finally! I had a decently etched piece I could work with. A whole year later. It was now the beginning of 2025. Now to enamel this correctly etched piece.

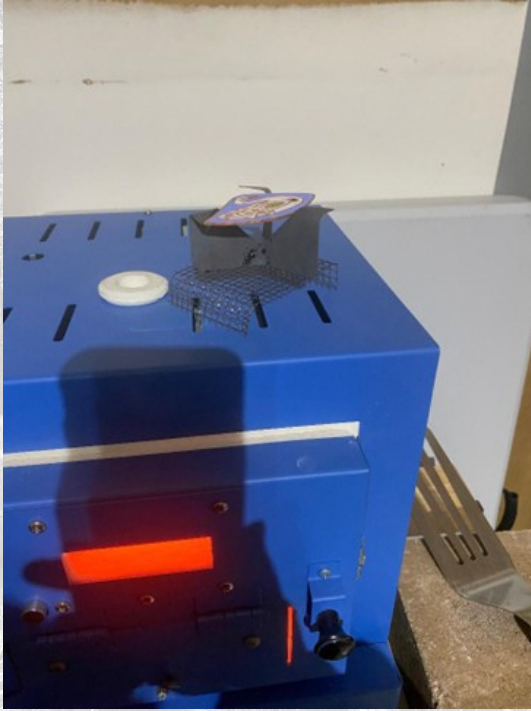

The other associated lessons learned with acid etching is that a soak in ammonia is required for the copper piece when it is removed from the acid. This cleans all the resist off. Leave it in long enough to clean it so it shines. After you remove the piece from the ammonia, you need to neutralize the ammonia by putting it in a baking soda and water bath. You can just splash it around in this mixture then remove. Take the piece from here and put in a pickle solution that will be the final cleaning. Pickle solution is 1 part salt to 8 parts vinegar and is prepared in a small crock pot so it can be heated for the best results. Dip in the baking soda water, wipe off and it's ready to be scrubbed with a green pad. I wear rubber gloves for this part prior to enameling. There should be no grease on the piece prior to applying the enamel.

By: Mistress Jorunn nic Lochlainn

In order to place the enamel in the holes, I mixed a little enamel with distilled water making a watery paste that could be applied with a tiny paint brush or toothpick. This is a slow process. Once all the enamel is applied, you need to use a piece of toilet paper to withdraw any excess water. If you put the watery enamel in the oven the water would boil and bubble creating holes in the enamel. To be sure all the water is gone, put the prepared piece on the top of the oven for about 30 minutes prior to putting it into the oven to dry. You should see the difference in tone of the enamel. It will look powdery when the water has evaporated. Only then, place in the oven.

I have discovered in my many attempts that 3 minutes is the perfect time for the enamel to melt once it is in the oven. Alexa kept time for me. When the piece was removed from the heat, the piece came out perfect! To rid the piece of the dry scale on the exposed copper, I soaked the piece in a hot pickle bath for about 10 minutes. Then a dip in neutralizing baking soda water. At this point I was ecstatic! The piece needed another coat of everything and I still had to counter enamel on the backside, but it looked good. The counter enameling went well. The second coat of enamel, using a toothpick to place the wet enamel, turned out fantastic. One plaque was complete.

For each copper plate going on the brooch, I had to cut out the brooch piece from the larger piece of copper. I used a jewelers' saw set in order to get the correct cut. Anyone who has used this method knows it is time consuming.

The second plaque etched perfectly, using the same process and times I used on the first one. The second plaque enameled perfectly to look just like the first plaque. Now it was ready to mount on the brooch.

One more obstacle. When I attempted to mount the enameled plaque on the base of the brooch, it snapped. I had to create two more 'cradles' for the enameled pieces and solder them to the curved section of the brooch. It was just time consuming. Now the whole brooch had been worked on in its re-creation. But, it is DONE!!

Manannan A&S Brooch, A year long learning Curve

By: Mistress Jorunn nic Lochlainn

I documented the learning process and am willing to share to save others the frustration I went through learning by trial and error both processes, acid etching the copper and then enameling the same. Now that I have mastered the process, I am moving on to my next project.

I hope Mistress Megara is looking down from above and is happy with what I accomplished, for it was in her memory I went through it all.

Baroness Jorunn nic Lochlainn, Mistress of the Laurel

Award Submission How-To-Guide

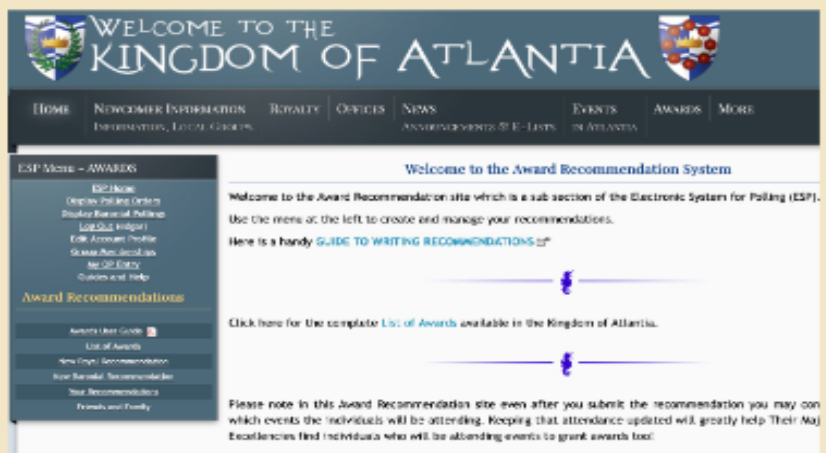

Award Submission Guide

The best time to submit an award recommendation is now! Your friends, family, and even distant acquaintances have likely done some work that is should be recognized by all. This small guide will help streamline the process and take out any guess work and help get people recognition that they have earned!

This guide is to help everyone, new and old alike, navigate the Award Recommendation System \(ARS\) and get those awards submitted for your Baronage and Their Royal Majesties to see.

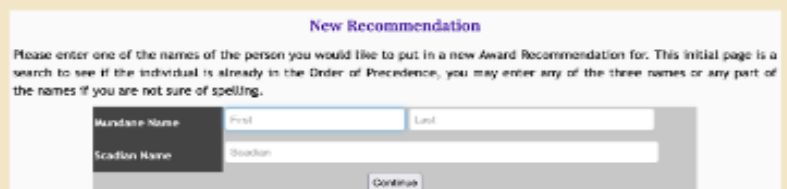

Step 1: Log in

In order to access the ARS, you must have a log in. ARS uses Atlantian Enterprise Login (AEL) so if you've ever signed in for the University of Atlantia, Orders of the Laurel, Pelican, Pearl, or Golden Dolphin – you're ready to go! There is a chance you'll still need to connect your account with your SCA membership but that's super easy, you just type in your account number. For this process, I have logged in as myself. Here is what your screen should look like:

Step 2: Enter their name

This is to help find their entry in the Order of Precedence (OP). Why is this important? Some people have very similar names, some may have changed their name. All in all, it's to help make sure you are selecting the right person to get the right award. That could be awkward.
